

Childcare Services

Riley Park/South Cambie RPSC

City Role

The City of Vancouver is committed to being an active partner with other levels of government, the private sector, the community, and parents in the development and maintenance of an affordable, high quality, and comprehensive child care system in Vancouver.

The City assists in the provision of child care in the following ways:

- provides grants to support non-profit child care services;
- provides grants to Neighbourhood Houses and Family Places for services to families with small children;
- leases land at nominal rates to non-profit child care societies;
- uses development cost levies from new development to support daycare facility needs in the community;
- negotiates for child care in new developments as part of major rezonings;
- works with community centres to support child care programs; and
- created the Vancouver Society of Children's Centres (VSOCC) to manage City-owned child care facilities (e.g. Library Square Children's Centre and the Dorothy Lam Children's Centre).

Westcoast Information Daycare

Westcoast Information Daycare program is a part of the Westcoast Child Care Resource Centre, a non-profit organization supported by funding from the City of Vancouver and the Ministry of Social Development and Economic Security.

Westcoast Information Daycare provides information and referral services for families seeking licensed child care in Vancouver, including:

- group child care centres;
- family child care homes;
- preschools;
- school-age care centres; and
- other specialized programs.

Information is also available on child care providers who do not require licences, and who are registered with the Vancouver Child Care Resource and Referral Program.

For more information contact Westcoast Information Daycare at (604) 709-5699.
