ROLL CALL 9:30 - 9:35 am

1. Conservation Review 9:35 am – 11:30 am

(a) 4949 Heather Street – Fairmont Building
VHR A
Policy Context Statement

The Fairmont Training Academy is a two-and-a-half storey Tudor Revival institutional building designed by prominent local architect Samuel Maclure in 1912. It was built in 1912 as Langara School, a private residential school for boys, but in 1920 was purchased by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and renamed the Fairmont Building. The building served as the force's provincial headquarters until 1950, then as the sub-divisional headquarters until the 1970s, and finally as the Fairmont Training Academy until recently. Changes to the building's interior have been substantial, but its remarkable and expressive exterior form and prominent features, including many windows, have remained intact.

Staff will provide follow up information arising from the update on this proposal at the regular meeting of the Vancouver Heritage Commission on April 9, 2017.

Staff:

- Kirsten Robinson, Planner III, Major Sites, Vancouver South
- James Boldt, Planner II Heritage Group
