MEETING THE HEALTH CARE NEEDS of Vancouver residents takes a range of partners, working together, to provide a comprehensive continuum of health care services.

Vancouver Coastal Health is proud of the relationships it has developed with community service providers to deliver health care services to more than one million people.

Addiction and Mental Health Services are an important part of the continuum of care Vancouver Coastal Health offers consumers. Each year, about four in 10 people will have some form of mental health problem and/or addiction problem – with two thirds of this population experiencing more common disorders such as anxiety disorders, depression and substance use disorders, while one third experience more serious and persistent conditions such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, opiate dependence and other conditions resulting in high levels of disability.

In the past, Addiction and Mental Health Services have operated separately, with the two fields developing unique treatment approaches and distinctive philosophies. Despite this history, compelling reasons exist to bring the two practice areas closer together – starting with strategic planning activities. Vancouver Coastal Health is committed to a people-centred approach to service delivery. People with addiction and mental health problems, especially those who experience both at one time or another, or concurrently, need mental health and addiction planning to become better coordinated and more streamlined. They need to have barriers to effective treatment and support removed and access to services simplified.

ADDICTION and MENTAL HEALTH STRATEGIC PLANNING

REGIONAL ADDICTION AND MENTAL HEALTH STRATEGIC PLANNING

Addiction and Mental Health Services planning is ongoing. Building on Strength:

The path ahead for a system-wide response to Mental Health and Addiction provides an overview of the strategic directions Vancouver Coastal Health intends to undertake on a regional basis over the next 10 years to address addiction and mental health. Rather than focus on a person's deficits and weaknesses, as has been done in the past, the regional strategic plan focuses on a person's, their family's and the community's unique strengths and capabilities.

Instead of stepping in only when people aren't well, Vancouver Coastal Health wants to create a system that reaches out earlier to support people in remaining healthy. Our strategic plan identifies the importance of partnership and collaboration as we build a system-wide response to mental health and addiction.

LOCAL MENTAL HEALTH AND ADDICTION STRATEGIC PLANNING

For each of the Health Service Delivery Areas and entities – Vancouver, Richmond, Coastal and Providence – the regional plan serves as a reference point to coordinate strategic planning activities and build an effective and responsive system of services and supports at the local level.

Vancouver Community, the part of Vancouver Coastal Health responsible for delivery of Addiction and Mental Health Services to Vancouver residents, references the regional plan as a starting point for its own planning, which sets the future direction of Mental Health Services and Addiction Services planning, development and delivery for residents of Vancouver.

Vancouver Community's strategic plans use the same framework, guiding principles and strategic directions as the regional strategic plan, and makes these relevant to the experience of Vancouver residents and neighbourhoods.

IN THE MEANTIME...

While Vancouver Coastal Health is engaged in long-range planning for mental health and addiction over the next five to 10 years, the Health Authority, in collaboration with our community partners, continues to improve on delivery of services today. Vancouver Community's Mental Health Services and Addiction Services provide a range of programs and services to children, youth, adults and older adults living in Vancouver. Although the two service areas operate independently, there is much overlap and cooperation between them.

Together, Addiction and Mental Health Services have developed an overall framework for service delivery to adults called Capable Lives and for young people called Capable Kids. These frameworks rely on a Strength-Based Approach for Addiction and a Recovery Approach for Mental Health. They build on the capabilities of individuals and communities in delivery of Mental Health and Addiction Services.

ADULT ADDICTION AND MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Capable Lives is the framework under which a continuum of addiction and mental health services are provided to adults in Vancouver. Addiction and mental health programs and services fall under a continuum that includes health promotion; disease prevention, early intervention and outreach; diagnosis and treatment; chronic disease management; rehabilitation, consumer initiatives and family support; and housing and residential services.

Vancouver Community delivers a range of addiction and mental health services through a combination of direct and contracted services, and through interdisciplinary teams. Services are provided in hospital, in residential facilities and throughout the community.

The following table provides an inventory of existing Addiction and Mental Health Services focused on adults and older adults residing in Vancouver. Services have been divided into Mental Health Services, Addiction Services and services for both populations. Many of the services that fall under Addiction Services are also accessed by people with mental health issues, and the reverse is also true. Neither a mental health disorder nor an addiction problem are reasons for exclusion from the majority of Mental Health and Addiction Services.

BUILDING ON THE STRENGTH OF THE CITY AND ITS RESIDENTS TO ASSURE THE HEALTH OF ALL

Both the regional mental health and addiction strategic plan, and Vancouver Community's mental health and addiction strategic plans identify the need to partner with stakeholders to address stigma and discrimination of people with addiction and mental health issues. Strong, supportive communities provide the best environment for people who are coping with major health challenges like addiction and mental health. We believe communities that work together to support their residents create strength, resiliency and better health for all. Capable Communities is based on Strength-Based and Recovery Approaches that assume communities that provide opportunities for the development of personal strengths produce individuals who are more resilient in the face of health challenges.

Vancouver Coastal Health's response to addressing the stigma associated with addiction and mental health is to convene Capable Communities – a community engagement process that invites Vancouver residents to take part in a discussion about the inclusion and integration of people with major health challenges into everyday life. Capable Communities begins with the question: what can we do to make our city the healthiest place for all residents? Capable Communities is formulated on the belief that information and education are fundamental for there to be a shift or change in attitude – developing knowledge and understanding of, and empathy for, the circumstances of people with mental health and addiction issues, which leads to a change in behaviour, and ultimately leads to a change in the condition of people's lives.

Capable Communities invites Vancouver residents to take the lead in talking about ways to include all people in community life, increase people's knowledge and awareness, and bring about long-lasting change to reduce and eliminate the stigma often associated with mental health and addiction problems.

Capable Communities are inclusive, respect diversity, engage residents in decision-making, and foster health and well being.

Capable Communities take care of all of their citizens, ensuring people have food to eat, a place to live and services to enhance their lives.

Capable Communities acknowledge that some residents need more support than others, but all residents deserve to be treated with respect and dignity.

Capable Communities play to their citizens' strengths, rather than focus on their frailties, shining a light on human excellence and on human virtues.

Capable Communities are ones in which people feel connected – to services, to care, to each other.

FRAMEWORK FOR IMPACT

INFORMATION

Creating and facilitating a dialogue about addiction and mental health in our community.

EDUCATION

Transferring knowledge about people with mental health and addiction issues, learning how these disorders affect the individual and the community and developing empathy.

ACTION

Involving and engaging individuals, families and communities to integrate people with addiction and mental health issues into community life.

CHANGE

Building on strengths of individuals and communities, resulting in permanent change in the condition of people's lives and the capacity of the community to respond.
