Subject: Tragically Hip Concert Screening on August 20th at the Vancouver Playhouse

Hello Sadhu,

On Saturday, Aug. 20, the Tragically Hip will put a cap on their Man Machine Poem tour with a hometown show in Kingston Ontario. CBC will be there to broadcast it to all of Canada, commercial-free, across television, radio and digital platforms and I am pleased to advise you that Vancouver Civic theatres has arranged for a screening for 600 people at the Vancouver Playhouse.

Rationale:

- The Playhouse has just become free on August 20, 2016 because the event booked that night is undersubscribed and has moved to the Annex.
- VCT staff has worked hard to develop the following business proposal:
 - No Cost for License - CBC license has been arranged through the Canadian Cancer Society on condition that access is open to public and tickets are free
 - No cost for screening or sound – the Vancouver Playhouse is set up for screening films so no costs will be incurred
 - Cost for staffing and security: $11,000 – can be funded out of two sources –
 - revenue from food and beverage sales during 5 hour event and; if necessary
 - unallocated "Underused Spaces Grant".

Event Details:

- 600 tickets to be advertised through the city's social and traditional media channels on a first come – first served to arrive at the QET Box Office noon to 2pm on Friday August 19, 2016;
- We will be giving direct notice to partners in community centers at Ray-Cam, Strathcona and Carnegie;
- Ticketmaster is printing tickets for us; the event will assign seats to ticket holders and;
- The event is for 19+ because this is the music industry standard for performances – alcohol will be sold and allowed inside the concert hall

Many thanks to Sandra Gajic and her VCT team for pulling this community/music industry event together on such short notice.
