\u8203 ?Hi Margo,

I'm sad to share that we lost Aurora tonight. Below is a statement that will be distributed shortly.

----- Please attribute quotes to Vancouver Aquarium -----

It's with immense sadness that the Vancouver Aquarium shares the passing of 29-year-old beluga whale Aurora. As detailed last week and through daily updates on her condition, Aurora had been sick for the past two weeks, showing symptoms of abdominal cramping, loss of appetite and lethargy. Our marine mammal care team, under the guidance of head veterinarian Dr. Martin Haulena, and a host of veterinary specialists, pathologists, marine biologists and other experts from around-the-world, had been working relentlessly to provide treatment, investigate her symptoms, adjust her medication, and ensure she had therapeutic care.

After a determined around-the-clock effort by animal care staff and the veterinary team, she slipped away this evening surrounded by the people who loved her, some whom have cared for her since she first arrived in 1990. To our team, Aurora was a part of our family and her loss is absolutely heartbreaking. The marine mammal care team working night and day to care for her are our true heroes, even if we lost the battle.

Named after the aurora borealis, or northern lights, Aurora immediately won hearts and inspired generations of visitors, employees and volunteers with her curious nature and gentle personality. Along with the other belugas at the Aquarium, including her daughter Qila, Aurora taught millions about her incredible species and its rapidly changing ecosystem in the wild. The whales have contributed to studies on their physiology, hearing and acoustic abilities; provided baseline data for studies in the wild; and helped scientists discover unique vocalizations between beluga whale mothers and calves, called contact calls. This groundbreaking research began at Vancouver Aquarium in 2002; beluga whales Aurora and Qila contributed to those early studies.

The past two weeks have been extremely difficult and today's loss has left a hole in our hearts. On behalf of our team of 1,500 staff and volunteers, we'd like to thank everyone who has reached out to us with warm messages of support and offers of help. You've shared countless stories of how Aurora and Qila have impacted you and your family and we're grateful to everyone who has shared those connections with us.

We will continue to investigate the cause or causes of Qila and Aurora's sudden illness — a necropsy will be conducted by Dr. Haulena tomorrow.

Can you please forward to Sarah Kirby-Yung as well thanks

Malcolm, John & Sarah,

I want to provide you with an update. As you all know, the health and safety of our animals are our top priorities at Vancouver Aquarium. We have been monitoring Aurora's behaviours closely since yesterday and we are concerned about her current health.

Aurora appears to be displaying symptoms similar to Qila before she passed yesterday morning. What we know is that yesterday's necropsy with Qila did not result in any clear outcome as to why she suddenly died.

We are investigating all possible medical explanations but have not yet received important test results that may help. Under the leadership of Dr. Haulena, the marine mammal care team has been caring for Aurora around-the-clock. She is currently in a hospital-like environment in our medical pool.

We are working with experts from around the world and flying in an additional professional expert from SeaWorld's veterinary team for assistance to ensure we have as many experts on the ground as possible exploring every option so that no stone is left unturned.

This is not the news I wanted to share with you today and many members of our team are doing everything they can. Our focus is on Aurora's care right now and I will provide you with regular updates as we learn more.

I know you are both enroute to the service awards. I just spoke to Malcolm on another issue before I saw this. Can I help you with this in any way Sarah? I know the reporter well, in fact I hired him. Don't like the increasing practice of approaching Commissioners directly as leaves you without support, logistical and otherwise.

I am going to contact Scott to determine his story focus and timelines and will not commit to any interview at this time. Will await direction on potential messaging, if any.

Dear Ms. Sarah Kirby-Yung,

My name is s.22(1), and my family is volunteering to organize a cleanup at Stanley Park Second Beach as part of the Great Canadian Shoreline Cleanup, presented by Loblaw Companies Limited. I am contacting you to make sure that we have permission to access the location we are planning to clean. I would also like advice on how to dispose of the waste we collect during our cleanup.

A joint conservation initiative of the Vancouver Aquarium and WWF, the Shoreline Cleanup is about removing shoreline litter to help create healthy waters for everyone, including the wildlife and communities that depend on them. It is a participant-driven event whereby volunteers, such as our group, register to coordinate shoreline cleanup events in their local community.

It is our responsibility to arrange waste collection and ensure that the location registered is accessible to clean on the date chosen by our group. Please take a moment and let us know the following so that we can proceed with planning our cleanup.

My Event Details: [Stanley Park Second Beach] [October 24th, 2015 at 13:00]

- Cleanup location availability: Please let us know if the location we registered is available. If there are any concerns, please provide suggestions on how to proceed.
 2. Waste removal instructions: We must determine the best method to dispose of the collected waste. Please let us know if you have an approved method and whom we should contact.

Thank you for taking the time to provide us with this important information. We are looking forward to hosting a local cleanup and discussing our event with you. For more information on this initiative, please visit the program website at ShorelineCleanup.ca or phone 1-877-427-2422.

Hello There;

This is an important documentary for Vancouver Tourism to be aware of. No doubt you are aware of the countless cases of tourism revenues being seriously eroded as a result of the bad publicity surrounding "attractions" that abuse wild animals. SeaWorld is a perfect example, and in fact, is linked to the Vancouver Aquarium. For those of us advocating for an end to the enslavement, exploitation and abuse of whales and dolphins, we are very grateful for this documentary.

<http://uk.whales.org/blog/2016/01/vancouver-aquarium-uncovered>

Heartbreaking, but so glad the enslavement, exploitation and abuse of whales and dolphins, a la Seaworld, is coming to light.
