Subject: Rainfall warning

Greetings Mayor and Council

Please be advised that Environment Canada may issue a Rainfall Warning for Sunday, and consequently, our Severe Weather IRG (Initial Response Guideline) thresholds of concern will be reached.

Current forecast:

- Starting Sunday early morning into Monday afternoon, there is a good likelihood of an Environment Canada Rainfall Warning being issued, with a very high likelihood of Vancouver getting 60 to 80 mms of rain. With the chance of seeing upwards of 90 mms.
- Prior to that, there is a likelihood of snow accumulations and rainfall up to 15 mms.

We are preparing our operations to respond in the event that this does occur. I'll keep you posted.

Best

Sadhu
