(iii diii diidagaan di ada)
May 7th, 2020
Good Afternoon:
Rangers s.15(1)(6) and s.15(1)(f) (36) monitored several major Stanley Park sites that had been occupied recently. The day commenced at)8:30 hr when Rangers s.15(1)(f) and s.15(1)(f) (84) travelled into a small camp (in the woods between s.19(1) , with Carnegie Outreach Coordinator John Norton, to talk with s.22(1) s.22(1) has been living in this location for the past s.22(1) initially s.22(1) claimed to be avoiding Covid -19 intection. s.22(1) camp is small and neat, but regardless 22(1) has to go Mr Norton and s.22(1) s.22(1) had a pleasant conversation. John Norton believes he can make arra ments for s.22(1) within the next week.
Rangers s.15(1)(f) then pushed on to relieve Park Ranger checkpoints, after which they resumed activity in the forest. First up was the removal of a small camp near the s.19(1) in Stanley Park. The owner, an s.22(1) s.22(1) was informed s.22(1) could not stay in the park. s.22(1) appeared to be compliant, and commenced taking down s.22(1) small structure.
Next on the list was the removal of items associated with the $\frac{\s.22(1)}{2.2(1)}$ Camp which was attended yesterday. The camp owner $\frac{\s.22(1)}{2.2(1)}$ had left when Rangers arrived. However there was a moderate amount of debris, along with the obligatory 7 or 8 bottles of urine and other camp remnants too disgusting to recollect. The individual had planned on staying for some time from all appearances. $\frac{\s.22(1)}{2.2(1)}$ was in the process of creating a wooden fence around $\frac{\s.22(1)}{2.2(1)}$ camp area. It appeared $\frac{\s.22(1)}{2.2(1)}$ has had several fires at this location, with a small fire-pit near to the tent location. All human debris was removed from the site. This is another location that provides a graphic example of the damage that these human "camps" do to the natural environment. The woods surrounding the area of camp use are bathed in soft velvety green mosses under a lower lit tree canopy. The camp area is a bare ground scar, seemingly hacked out of the forest floor No vegetation, only twisted branches and manipulated logsrecovery will take a long time if left to occur naturally. Upon leaving, Rangers attempted to close up the entry trail at the point where it meets with $\frac{\s.19(1)}{\s.19(1)}$ Rangers carefully shifted a few smaller branches and forest material to try and disguise the entry point to the camp. Rangers will monitor any further activity. This may be a worthwhile place for active restoration work by Urban Forestry or SPES.
At 12:00 Noon, Rangers checked sites in the $.19(1) area (part of the $.19(1)), but were pleased to fine no return camp activity. They then moved on to inspect the relatively pristine woods off $.19(1) This is an area accessed by a smaller trail which leads to the $.19(1) area for Stanley Park). Rangers walked the length of the trail, checking small side trails for signs of human activity. There were small piles of torn paper along one of these trails, indicating possible route marking. However, no camps were found. It does appear that mountain biking activity may bear watching in this area.
Rangers returned to the Service Yard at 13:15 hr.
