

RESEARCHING BUILDINGS AND HOUSES

This reference guide provides an overview of the types of records from the City of Vancouver Archives that relate to researching commercial and residential properties, including examples of specific fonds or collections. Please keep in mind that additional records may be found among the total Archives' holdings.

Records may be accessed either through record requests submitted for retrieval from our secure storage, self-serve microfiche access copies in the Reading Room, or, if digitized, viewed as a digital copy from our online database. Record retrievals run Monday-Friday, 10:00-4:30.

General Tips:

- While this guide outlines a number of available resources for conducting building history research, the relevant and commonly used records for most properties are water service records, building permits, fire insurance plans, property tax records and city directories.
- The legal description is often used for property research. As the unique identifier for parcels of land, this number typically remains the same (perhaps with lots further subdivided) whereas civic addresses may change over time. Legal descriptions consist of three parts: the District Lot number (can be abbreviated as "D.L."), Block number, and Lot number. A Subdivision ("Sub") number is used in some cases.
- The names of some Vancouver streets have changed in the past, which may affect searching the address of a particular property. A valuable resource is the book, Street Names of Vancouver by Elizabeth Walker, which provides an alphabetical listing of streets and avenues. Copies are available in our Reading Room or through the Vancouver Public Library.
- The Municipalities of Point Grey and South Vancouver (much of which included the current area of east Vancouver) were separate until they amalgamated into the City of Vancouver in 1929. Our holdings do contain records of these two earlier Municipalities, however, the available records are more limited.
- Most of the architectural plans at the Archives are for public buildings or other significant structures. Plans for residential homes may be available and can be searched from our online database or contact the Archives directly. Note that access to architectural drawings for standing properties is restricted in accordance with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (FOIPPA) and permission is required from the owner. Elevation drawings or plans of demolished buildings are open for access. Please contact the Archives about accessing architectural drawings.

CITY RECORDS

City records used as primary sources related to City operations and departmental functions in connection to property matters. Particular suggestions for property research are:

- Water Service Applications (COV 367 and COV-S293) and Water Service Record Cards (COV-S294)
  - Used to find the date of the initial and subsequent water applications for determining the approximate date of the completion of a house or other building; water service records also provide the name of the applicant, legal description of lot, and sometimes details on a building's use; from 1888-1993
  - Holdings also include water service records of the former municipalities of Point Grey, 1908-1928 (COV-PG-S256); and South Vancouver, 1914-1928 (COV-SV-S230)
- Building Permit Registers (COV-S385)
  - Used for the date of the building application, name of the permit applicant, estimated value of work and other details from 1901-1904, 1908-1947
  - Holdings include permit applications of the former municipalities of Point Grey (COV-PG-S272) and South Vancouver (COV-SV-S234) from 1912-1928
  - Arranged chronologically by permit application number; some records also arranged by legal description; some records have indexes to owner names
  - There is no direct source for obtaining a permit application number; the approximate date of construction can be found using water service records
  - See also the online Building Permit Database created by Heritage Vancouver Society for a searchable means of reviewing early permit records (p. 5 of guide)
- Property Tax Records (multiple COV series)
  - Used to identify the assessed values of land, assessed values of improvements to properties, and the name of the property owner that tax year
  - Holdings include both tax assessment rolls and tax billing statements within the current Vancouver municipal boundaries from 1880-2005
  - Note that there are gaps in these records, most significantly from 1890-1929 for the City of Vancouver Includes records of Point Grey, 1910 only, and South Vancouver, 1893-1927 (with gaps)
  - Consult the property tax records reference guide for more information
- Building Permit Application Architectural Plans and Drawings (COV-S393)
  - Plans submitted as part of the building permit application and selected by the Archives for historic interest, including schools, theatres, apartment buildings, commercial properties, downtown buildings etc. from 1887-1999
  - Arranged by address
  - Note that this series contains minimal plans for single family homes
- Sectional Maps (multiple series, e.g. COV-S508)
  - Used for an overview of surveyed areas showing development history of neighbourhoods and to determine legal description of lots
  - Maps for former municipalities of Point Grey (COV-PG-S247) and South Vancouver (COV-S674:- MAP 871) are also available

CITY DIRECTORIES

Annual directories (1886-1996) produced by private firms listing names of residents, properties, and business listings. Directories can be used to determine names, addresses, years of residency, and occupations of Vancouver residents (some years are B.C. directories). Please note that directories were compiled by private firms for business purposes so they are convenient and broad in scope, but not authoritative and there are demographic omissions. Directories can be reviewed as bound books as well as on microfilm in the Reading Room.

See also our reference guide on city directories for more a more detailed overview. City directories for the years 1860-1955 have also been digitized and can be viewed online through the Vancouver Public Library.

NEWS CLIPPINGS

Used for information about businesses, organizations, individuals and families, issues, events etc. There are different sets of clippings, each with its own alphabetical sequence:

- Major Matthews Collection (AM54-Series 17- News clippings) 1860-1970

BOOKS

Secondary sources used for information on the history of City planning and development, architecture and local architects, prominent buildings, and neighbourhoods in Vancouver. The Archives' has its own reference library collection that can be accessed when visiting the Archives. Some general suggestions are:

MORE ONLINE RESOURCES

Building Permit Database

The Heritage Vancouver Heritage Society offers an online Building Permit Database to search the Vancouver permit records for the years 1901-1925 as well as pre-amalgamation records of Point Grey and South Vancouver up to 1928. This volunteer transcription project compiled information from the building permit records held by the City of Vancouver Archives. The online database allows for searching by various filters such as year, legal description, address, and name of owner or architect as well as by City.

Project work is ongoing and more transcriptions are continuously added to the database. See the Society's website for more information.

VanMap

VanMap Viewer is an online GIS (geographic information systems) mapping tool by the City of Vancouver that serves a variety of functions related to property, City amenities, and transportation data. Useful for building research to quickly determine 1) the legal description and 2) the year a structure was built for a property site. VanMap offers a search function that can be set to an Address Search. Once found (highlighted in green), a "Property Report" can be generated that will provide these details for an individual property.

VanMap also includes a map layer of the 1912 Goad's fire insurance plan. See also our fire insurance reference guide for more information.
