Notes:

A homeowner may perform electrical work in their fully detached dwelling under an installation permit only if the electrical work involves only installations in which the current and voltage do not exceed 200 amps and 150 volts to ground, single phase.

A homeowner may perform regulated electrical work under an installation permit in their own fully detached dwelling if that dwelling is, or is intended to be, the permanent residence of the homeowner. Fully detached dwelling is building specifically designed for single family use. Duplex, triplex or any other dwelling designed for multi-family use is not considered a fully detached dwelling. Similarly, fully detached dwelling with self-contained suite is considered multi-family.

A qualified person is an individual who is competent to perform electrical works; and who is also familiar with the electrical systems and equipment and the hazards involved.
