Wear pink on February 26 to take a stand against bullying

The City's Respect Works Here campaign runs from February 24 to 28, and coincides with BC's Pink Shirt Day on February 26, where everyone is encouraged to wear pink as a way of showing that you take a stand against bullying, discrimination, homophobia and harassment. Bullying is a form of aggression where there is a power imbalance; the person doing the bullying has power over the person being victimized. In addition to any physical trauma incurred, bullying can result in serious emotional problems, including anxiety, low self-esteem, or depression.

To participate in Pink Shirt Day, wear pink on February 26. If you choose to take a selfie or team photo, you can send it to internalcomms@vancouver.ca by February 28 to be shared on Currents.

Restorative practices through our Respect in the Workplace Policy

If you have felt bullied at work and are not able to address the issue directly with the other party, you have options outlined in the Respect in the Workplace Policy. One of these options is to request a restoration process. Restoration processes are facilitated by the Equity Office, external consultants, or exempt supervisors with support from the Equity Office, and are designed with consideration to the needs of the parties involved.

Restoration processes do not result in disciplinary action; instead, they aim to restore trust in relationships and to identify the root causes of the conflict. Some of the principles of a restorative approach are:

- Compassion over blame
- Create understanding instead of perpetuating shame
- Be hard on the problem, kind to the person
- Focus on changing behaviour, not punishing the individual

Please note that restoration is not the only course of action when you are the target of, or witness to, bullying behaviour; an investigation may also be needed. Restoration processes are a complementary approach to making complaints and investigation processes.

While Pink Shirt Day and our annual Respect Works Here campaign only occur once each year, please remember that doing your part to build a respectful, inclusive and supportive workplace is something expected of all City staff year-round.

Resources to help manage financial stress

Mental, physical, and financial wellness are key components of overall health. However, financial stress is the leading cause of stress for many Canadians, surpassing concerns about work, personal health and relationships.

Common sources of financial stress include managing household expenses, high debt levels, living paycheque to paycheque, saving challenges and unexpected expenses. Financial stress affects Canadians across all income levels and age groups.
