

A developer bought our rental building

We're being told we need to move out

Our rental home was just sold

I'm being offered money to move out of my rental

We've been told to move out because of renovations

Renting in Vancouver? Know your rights.

All renters in B.C. are protected by provincial tenancy laws. If you rent in Vancouver and are facing eviction due to redevelopment or renovation, you could be entitled to extra protections from the City.

These may include:

- financial compensation or temporary rent top-up
- help finding new housing and moving assistance
- the right to return to the new building at a discounted rent or your previous rent
- additional support for low-income renters or tenants facing extra barriers

These protections apply city-wide, with enhanced support in specific areas.
