

This morning around 7:30 a.m., our neighbour and her keen dog witnessed a young man breaking into our black Jeep. She called 911. The perp punched the passenger door lock and forced the locked glove box open. He seemed to be looking for anything of value as opposed to intending to steal the jeep itself.

Our neighbour watched him from the safety of her 2nd floor window until the police apprehended him with a K9 unit approximately 5 minutes later. The police forensics team came out and got several good prints off the vehicle.

We feel very lucky and grateful to live on a block comprised of such a caring and aware community. Our neighbour is a gem and a good friend to us in so many ways! It's a bonus that she successfully thwarted a thief-- most importantly without endangering herself.
