Message

As City Clerk, it is my pleasure to present the 46th annual published report of the City of Vancouver Archives. Established in 1933, the Archives is dedicated to the preservation of the corporate memory of the City of Vancouver and the documentary heritage of the local community.

Each year the Archives team undertakes special projects focused on improved preservation and public access. I am continually impressed by the team's innovative and progressive nature, communications with the public and professionalism.

Some of these special projects would not be possible without external partners including the Friends of the Vancouver City Archives to whom I would like to give a special thank you. The Friends' volunteer board meets throughout the year and raises funds for the Archives. Thank you to: Jill Kelly, Merrilee Robson, Kevin Bowers, Neal Jennings, John Atkin, Tom Carter, Aaron Chapman, Jennifer Chutter, Margaret Sutherland and Elana Zysblat. Your work is appreciated!

In 2023 the Friends held three fundraisers: an online lecture, a walking tour and a book reading at the Archives raising a total of $2,445. They also provided grants of over $23,000 to the Archives. These grants were critical to fund two projects. The first involved digitizing 8,000 photographic negatives taken as part of the City's Heritage Inventory projects from 1964 to 1977. This completes digitization of all Heritage Inventory photographs in the Archives' holdings, including those related to the 1986 Heritage Inventory, over 22,000 images in total. The second project focused on creation of preliminary descriptions of 7,500 photographic prints from the Vancouver Courier newspaper's photo collection donated in 2008. This lays the groundwork for digitization of these photographs in 2025.

If you have not done so already, please check out the Archives on the City of Vancouver's website, follow on one of its social channels or come visit in person—a beautiful setting for an important City resource.

Highlights

It seems like only yesterday we were celebrating the Archives' 80th anniversary, and suddenly, just like that, we were 90. On June 12, 1933, Major JS Matthews was appointed City Archivist, officially founding the City Archives, and we decided to honour the occasion with some low-key celebrations: nothing like the grand events of our 75th, but something fun to scratch the celebratory itch on the way to 100.

We decided to focus the anniversary on raising our post-pandemic profile, with the main event a social media campaign on Instagram, Facebook and X, highlighting 90 different records groups from our holdings during the 90 days leading up to the anniversary. Each post was tagged with #VanArchives90th, and some of the records groups highlighted were familiar and popular ones: the City Council minutes, the Yucho Chow Community Archive Collection, the BC Gay and Lesbian Archives, the Pacific National Exhibition fonds, the Yaletown Productions Ltd. fonds. Others were lesser known but important gems. Led by our two archival assistants, Bronwyn Smyth and Christine Tutt, the campaign was a great success and garnered considerable social media engagement. If you missed it, check out the hashtag, or a visual representation of all 90 posts on our YouTube channel.

The anniversary period made for a very busy spring. In March, the Friends of the Archives invited me to speak about the social media campaign at their annual general meeting and to reflect on how the holdings and our services have changed over time. In April, three of us participated in a Vancouver Heritage Foundation Lunch and Learn webinar, focusing on the services we offer now. On May 30th, City Council proclaimed June 12th "City of Vancouver Archives Day," and on June 7th, a number of Councillors and Park Board Commissioners visited our Vanier Park site for a back-of-house tour and helped us cut the anniversary cake.

On June 14th, things wrapped up with a back-of-house tour for members of the Vancouver Historical Society. We also received some great media attention, both from the CBC and the Vancouver Sun.

Highlights

Behind the scenes, staff continued to work on a number of projects, many of which are mentioned elsewhere in this report. One major accomplishment, however, was our work on making some of the Vancouver Sun negatives available to the public. Postmedia had donated all of their Sun and Province negatives to us in 2017—5.6 million of them in 250,000 envelopes, each envelope representing a single photo shoot or job. Since early 2020, we have been steadily working to transcribe the metadata on the envelopes and turn that into file-level archival descriptions. In 2023 we made a push to do the final quality control on this work and uploaded over 32,000 descriptions to our online database. More descriptions are waiting for final review, and we anticipate these will be added in 2024. In the meantime, our two archival assistants continue to transcribe and will shortly finish all the Sun negatives dating up to the mid-1980s.

On the facilities front, design work proceeded for our East Vancouver satellite site renovation. That work revealed that additional funding would be required, and I'm pleased to report that funding was secured in December. We will select a general contractor early in the new year, and anticipate construction starting in the early spring. Within 8 to 12 months of that, we will have a shiny new HVAC system and walk-in frozen storage unit, and new, deeper and more efficient shelving units that should give us capacity to grow for the next 10 to 15 years. We anticipate record retrievals from the satellite site will not be impacted during the construction.

I'm very much looking forward to what 2024 will bring, and as always, I am very grateful for the Archives' staff's commitment to their work, their innovative thinking, and good humor. Our 91st year will be a good one.

Preserve

One of the major themes in the 2023 preservation programme was the revision and expansion of the Archives' existing Emergency Plan. In coordination with the City's Business Continuity Plan initiative, we decided it was a perfect time to freshen up the Archives staff's knowledge on emergency response and disaster salvaging techniques with a half-day hands-on workshop. The workshop was a success and prompted many engaging questions to help refine our Emergency Plan; it also gave us the opportunity to put our upgraded disaster salvaging kit to test.

A few treatment highlights for the year include: tear repairs on our frequently requested Prisoners' record book: volume 1 and the humidification/flattening of a series of newly acquired street banners. The rehousing of the millions of Vancouver Sun and Province photographs into frozen storage continued making steady progress this year, and these now fill more than eight freezer cabinets.

Digitize

The digitization of the remaining 7,083 photographic negatives dated between 1967 and 1977, as part of the Heritage Inventory Project from the City's Planning Department, was almost completed this year. Approximately 1,000 more negatives, as well as an additional 1,000 street intersection photos captured in the 1980s by the City's Engineering Department will be digitized in January 2024. This project was made possible with the continuing support of the BC History Digitization Program and the Friends of the Vancouver City Archives.

In early 2023, we reconfigured our office layout to create a single, centralized digitization lab, which kicked off an exciting year for the digitization team. The new layout in the digitization lab not only improved the efficiency of our scanning and processing capabilities, more importantly, it carved out a dedicated space for the latest addition to our fleet of scanning equipment, the Atiz BookDrive Mark 2 book scanner. The acquisition of the book scanner will allow us to begin digitizing and making available online the remainder of the City Council meeting minutes that are still in bound format, dating from the earliest volume in 1886 to the more recent ones in the early 2000s. It will also considerably expand our capability to digitize many other records in our holdings that were not feasible before due to the physical restriction of their binding. We look forward to widening the scope of our in-house digitization programme with our new book scanner—stay tuned for updates!

DIGITIZATION STATISTICS

Images (photographs, maps and art)	8,289
Pages of text	2,944
Pieces of tax microfiche	69

VHS tapes	21

In addition, a total of 109 digital reproduction orders were completed for a total of 4,172 images and pages. Revenue generated from reproduction charges was $7,325.

STAFF PROJECTS

- Heather Gordon and Paola Merkins worked with Real Estate and Facilities Management staff on the design of upgrades to the Archives' temporary satellite site in East Vancouver.

- With funding from the BC History Digitization Program and the Friends of the Vancouver City Archives, Archives staff undertook a project to make 8,084 Heritage Inventory and intersection photographic negatives from the City's Planning and Engineering departments available online. Mandy Roddick, Sammy Van Herk, Jana Grazley and Dorcas Tong were involved in this project.

- Bronwyn Smyth and Christine Tutt continued to transcribe metadata from Vancouver Sun photo shoot job envelopes and boxed them for preservation in frozen storage. Jana Grazley uploaded to our online database much of the metadata created as a result of this project over the past three years, resulting in over 32,000 files available for public access.

- Sharon Walz completed a three-year project to process the more than 33,300 Vancouver Building Department/Permits and Licensing Department architectural drawings, most of which were associated with building permit applications.

- Kira Baker and Jana Grazley continued working on reparative description to review and revise legacy archival descriptions that contain problematic and outdated language.

- Glenn Dingwall completed a multi-year project to make all of the heritage consultancy files in the Hal Kalman fonds available to the public.

- Dorcas Tong led a half-day hands-on workshop for Archives' staff on Emergency Response and Collection Salvage, which also led to the update and expansion of the Archives' existing Emergency and Salvage Kit.

- Dorcas Tong, Mandy Roddick, Paola Merkins, and Heather Gordon reconfigured our digitization workspaces and procured and set up a new book scanner.

- Jana Grazley and Kira Baker continued collaboration on the 2022-2024 Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada-funded project, Crossing Fonds: Pollinating Access and Interpretation, led by Dr. Sara Diamond and based out of Ontario College of Art & Design University.

- Glenn Dingwall continued participation in the InterPARES Trust AI Project, a multi-national Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada-funded project investigating the potential application of artificial intelligence technologies to archival work, and the associated benefits and risks.

- Heather Gordon and Paola Merkins implemented a process to increase and facilitate access to the holdings kept at the Archives' satellite site by augmenting the information available through the Archives' location management system. A total of 9,354 files were imported, adding new data to existing records and new records to the system.
